Key points include God being a central speaker in the conversation with coach and client along with intentional reflection on the Spirit’s movement in the client’s life and work. Worth the read for any Christian coach.August 3, 2021Blackaby is such a phenomenal teacher. I found myself underlining so much of this book; if you are a coach, this is a definite MUST read! Much to learn, as you grow into the coaching world. As a coach I always read and update myself with Godly guidance from good teachers like Blackaby. Without giving away all his teachings, I would simply say, grab the book yourself and have a notebook with a highlighter - pray and let God guide as you continue to learn how to reach people !!!December 24, 2019Reading Experiencing God was transformational for me in discipleship, so I had high expectations for this book. While there good principles are clearly explained, I felt like my expectations weren’t met. Good spiritual coaching is described as listening well, asking questions and speaking intentionally with as few words as possible. July 9, 2024excellent resource and guide to Christian coaching in the ministry context. Good overview of coaching, but really good in the ins and outs of spiritual discernment in the context of a coaching relationship.Displaying 1 - 4 of 4 reviewsGet help and learn more about the design. We have encountered hundreds of discouraged men and women who were ready to resign their leadership positions but retained a heartfelt desire to serve God. As we helped them discover God’s agenda, leaders from all walks of life found encouragement and direction for their lives and organizations. We do not exclusively teach those engaged in full-time Christian work, although those serving in vocational ministry can certainly benefit from the truths we discuss. The guidelines we present are relevant to all Christians who desire to be spiritual leaders. Spiritual leadership is not an occupation; it is a calling. Christian businesspeople, physicians, educators, politicians, and parents should all be spiritual leaders. More and more people in “secular” occupations are taking their calling as spiritual leaders seriously, and they are impacting the world and extending God’s kingdom as a result. People can only lead effectively once they understand leadership in light of their divine calling. According to the Bible, God is not necessarily looking for leaders; He is looking for servants (Isa. 59:16; Ezek. 22:30). When God finds people who are willing to be molded into His servants, the possibilities are limitless. If you have questions about spiritual leadership, or if you would like to schedule a leadership event, please contact Rick Fisher at rfisher@blackaby.org. A Note from Dr. Richard Blackaby Our ministry team travels across the country as well as internationally, speaking and training people in leadership. Countless times we have talked with leaders who were struggling and needed help to address issues they were facing. Or they sensed God had much more He wanted to do through them and their organization, but they didn’t know what to do next. My father cannot personally mentor all those who would like him to. However, with so many people asking us for help, God led us to develop this site where we could gather outstanding biblical leadership resources so anyone seeking to grow as a leader could access it. We have been life-long learners and we hope this leadership network will help you take your leadership to an entirely new level as you allow God to use your life mightily in the position He has placed you. Join the SLN The cost to join the BMI Spiritual Leadership Network is now only $1.99. You can access the network via the website or the BMI App. To register, simply press the “Payment” button.
