Notifications are an essential part of any smartphone. They let you know when to pay attention to your phone. However, with a touch of customization, you can take your notification game to the next level. If you want to know how to set custom notification sounds on your Android device, you've come to the right place. In this article, you'll learn exactly how to do so.

How to Use Custom Notification Sounds for an Individual App on Android

While different apps come with their own unique notification sounds and beeps, you may want to customize the sounds. Here are simple steps you can follow to accomplish this:

1. Open "Settings" on your Android phone. Click on "Apps & Notifications."
2. Click on "See all Apps" to select the app for which you'd like to customize the notification sound. You should now see a list of all the apps that support push notifications on your device. Go ahead and select the one you wish to customize. A new modal should open up. Click "Notifications" to proceed. You should now see a list of all notifications. Go ahead and click on the specific notification you'd like to customize. A widget should open with several options about the type of notification you selected above. Click on "Sound" and select the tone that sounds best for you. Save your newly made changes. That was easy, right? Now, whenever a notification trickles in, you should hear the sound you have just selected instead of the default sound. You can also repeat the process for as many apps as possible.
3. How to Use Custom Notification Sounds for Chats

Here's how you can set custom notification sounds for all the text messages on your Android device. Open the default messaging app. Open "Menu" and click on "Settings." Choose "Notifications" and then click on "sound." From the options, select your preferred tone. If you don't want any sound notification for your text messages, you can select "none". Also, you can opt for a simple vibration if buzzes aren't your thing by selecting "vibration".

How to Use Custom Notification Sounds for Individual Chats

Some Android-based models allow you to customize sounds for individual chats. This can be especially helpful if you have high-priority chats from your contact list, like work or from loved ones. The feature can also help you identify who is texting just by listening to the notification sound. Here's how to set custom notification sounds on Samsung: Launch the messages app on your device. Select the chat in question. Select "Notifications and sounds." A widget should open up showing you several operations that you can perform on your messages. Select the now active "Custom notifications" option. Click the toggle button beside "Custom notifications." A modal should open up with a "Sound" option. Click on the sound option to choose the song or tone that you want to apply to the selected chat.

How to Use Custom Notification Sounds for Gmail

Gmail is an app that connects you to other professionals regardless of location. As a result, it's critical to have a custom notification sound for it, so that you don't miss any of those urgent emails on time. Here's how to set a customized notification sound for Gmail: On your Android phone, open the Gmail app. Tap the hamburger menu in the left corner of the screen. Scroll down and click on "Settings." Choose the email address for which you want to customize notification sounds. Click on "Notification sounds." Click on "Advanced," then go to "Sound." Select the tone that meets your taste from the provided options.

How to Use Custom Notification Sounds for Call Ringtones

Choosing a suitable notification sound for your phone is essential. The sound that you choose should be loud enough and appropriate for when you get those abrupt calls in crowds. Here's how to customize the notification sound for your phone calls: On your mobile phone, open "Settings." Select "sound." Click on "ringtone" and you should now be presented with default tones from the manufacturer. Click on each tone to get a gist of how it sounds. Select a tone that you like best and set it as the ringtone. Note: Android phones vary a lot due to high-end customization options. Therefore, the names mentioned above may differ from one device to another but they mean pretty much the same thing. As another option, you can set a ringtone from your Music App. To do this, follow these steps: Launch the default Android music app on your phone. Select any song that you'd like to set as a ringtone. A widget should pop up with all the actions for the currently selected song. Tap on the three dots on the right. From the options, select "set as ringtone." The music player allows you to set your favorite song as a ringtone, as well.

Phone calls Text messages Alarm clock Contacts Calendar reminders Additional FAQ Where can I find custom sounds for my notifications? Finding custom sounds for your notifications is quite easy. You can decide to record your own audio using the built-in sound recorder that you can find on your device. You can then edit this audio with the aid of free audio editors that are available on the Google Play. Some audio editors are simple and only allow for simple trims and cuts. Other editors, on the other hand, are really robust and enable you to add sound effects to your audio. All of which can make your notification sound more appealing. Alternatively, you can use Audacity. Audacity is an open-source desktop-based audio editor that will give you all the capabilities you need in an audio editor. As another option, you can use the music you already have on your device as a notification sound. How do you change the generic notification sound for all notifications? Launch "Settings." 2. Scroll down to "Apps & Notifications." 3. Click on "Notifications." 4. Choose "Advanced." 5. Go to "Default notification Sound." 6. From the given options, select a tone that you like best. Take Back Control of How Your Notifications Sound Notifications are important, but they can be overwhelming at times. Having control over your notification sounds helps you filter out what is important from what isn't. As a result, you can choose which sound you should pay attention to, and which one should remain on the fluff list. Have you tried using custom notifications on your Android device yet? How was the experience? Let us know in the comments section below. I have the same issue. I purchased my phone on April 15th, and it's been nothing but "Cosmic Radio" as a ringtone since. I can Choose another ringtone, it will last a few hours or so, but never more than a day. I've been to T-Mobile many times including a full factory reset. I've also dealt with Samsung repair services remotely. Their solution is for me to mail my phone in and then receive a phone in about a week after they inspect my current phone. I told them I'm not going to be without a phone for a week due to their equipment issues... So I currently still have the same issues as of today June 9th 2022. Download Download Download

Download Download Download Download Download Download Download Download Download Download Download I sometimes want to use my own song as a ringtone or notification alert. It wasn't always the case, but doing this has become an effortless feat with Android. This guide will show you how to set an MP3 file as a custom ringtone or notification sound. Let's get right to it. Also: The best customization apps for Android Note: All steps in this tutorial were put together using a Pixel 4a with 5G running Android 12 and a custom PC with Windows 11. Keep in mind steps might differ depending on your hardware and software version. RequirementsRobert Triggs / Android AuthorityYou don't need much to set an MP3 file as a ringtone or notification sound. Technically, the only requirements are an Android phone and an MP3 file. You might need an internet connection, depending on whether you have the MP3 stored locally or not. You might also need a PC and extra software for trimming the audio file. Trimming the MP3 fileYou don't want the whole song to be played as a ringtone. Well, you might, and you can skip this step if you do. That won't always be the case, though. You'll often want to hear only a specific part of a song or MP3 audio. You can use various software to trim your audio files, such as Adobe Audition, Reaper, and Pro Tools. We'll only touch on a couple of options to simplify things, though; one for PC and one for Android. How to trim an MP3 file with Audacity: Download, install, and launch Audacity. It's available for Windows, macOS, and Linux. Go to File > Import > Audio. Select the MP3 you want to find. Use the selection tool and cursor to highlight the audio part you want to keep as your ringtone. Once a section has been selected, you can press the space bar to play only that part and ensure you like it. Now click Edit > Remove Special > Trim Audio. Only the section you selected will remain. Drag your audio to the beginning of the timeline. I would also advise using the Fade In and Fade Out in the beginning and end. These options can be accessed by going to the Effect menu. Now go to File > Export and select MP3. Move the file to your smartphone. How to trim an MP3 file with Music Editor: Download and install Music Editor from the Google Play Store. Move the MP3 file to your Music folder using a file manager. Launch Music Editor. Tap on the Trim Audio option. Select the song you want to turn into a phone ringtone. Drag the sliders to select the part of the song you want to keep as a ringtone. The green one is the beginning and the red one the end. You can use the media controls at the bottom to get a preview. Hit the floppy disk icon on the top-right. Select a name for the new file. Hit OK. How to set an MP3 as a ringtone on Android: Download or transfer the song you want to set as your ringtone to your phone. This can be done through USB, direct download, or any cloud storage solution of your preference. If you use a service like Google Play Music, download the mp3 file to your device. Open the Settings app. Go to Sound & vibration. Hit Phone ringtone. Go to My Sounds. If your ringtone doesn't show up, hit the + button in the bottom-right corner. Find the song and select it. Hit Save. How to set an MP3 file as a notification soundRyan-Thomas Shaw / Android AuthorityNotification sounds blast off more commonly than ringtones, so giving them your personal touch is essential. The process is very similar, but here's a step-by-step guide to make things easier. Using an MP3 file as a notification sound: Open the Settings app on your Android phone. Select Sound & vibration. Hit Default notification sound. Go to My Sounds. If your ringtone doesn't show up, hit the + button in the bottom-right corner. Find the song and select it. Hit Save. Next: How to fix common Android issues Setting MP3 ringtones for specific contactsDavid Imel / Android AuthoritySetting a personalized ringtone for each contact is also possible in the stock Contacts app: Launch the Contacts app and open a contact's info page. Hit the three-dot menu button in the top-right corner. Tap on Set Ringtone. Select the ringtone you want to use for that contact. Hit Save. Next: 5 best Android apps for notification tones and ringtones FAQs What other file formats can I use to set a ringtone?MP3 is the most commonly used format for audio, songs, and ringtones, but it's not the only one. Android all supports M4A, WAV, and OGG. Can I buy ringtones for Android?There are plenty of apps and websites for buying ringtones. Sadly, there is no official store for Android users to get them. It would be nice if we could simply pay for Android ringtones from the Google Play Store, just like Apple users can buy them from iTunes. Maybe sometime in the future. Is it legal to make my own ringtones?Generally speaking, in the USA, it is. You must use legally purchased songs, and you can't sell or distribute the ringtones. Make sure you do your research, though, as we're not legal counselors or experts. Also, laws can change from place to place, so look into your local laws.
