Anime is one of the most popular forms of animation in the world today. Produced mainly in Japan, this medium of animation is loved around the world, and you can expect to experience all manner of different stories. Some have stories that are action-packed while others can be sad, comedic, scary or a mix of all these elements! The character style is also very expressive and detailed, and anime expressions can convey a lot of emotion. It can also make learning how to draw a sad anime character a bit of a challenge, however. It won't be an impossible challenge though, and this tutorial is here to show you that it can be easier than expected. Our step-by-step guide on how to draw a sad anime in just 6 steps will show you how it can be done! How to Draw A Sad Anime - Let's Get Started! Step 1 We will keep things simple in this first step of our guide on how to draw a sad anime. The facial expression will be the trickiest part of this drawing, so we shall work our way up to that aspect slowly throughout this guide. For now, we will be drawing the outline of the hairstyle for this character. The good news is this is really easy to do, as all you need to do is draw a curved line. This single line will serve as both the sides and the top of the hairstyle, and we will add more details to it as we go. For now, it's on to step 2 of the guide! Step 2 - Draw some more of the hairstyle You started the outline of the hairstyle in the first step, and now you can start adding detail to it in this step of our guide on how to draw a sad anime. For now, we will be drawing the hair going over the face. As is common in the anime style, the hair will be made up of several pointy sections. Use some curved lines culminating in sharp points for the various sections of hair dropping over the face. You can try to replicate the hair exactly as it appears in our reference image by closely copying the lines there if you struggle with this part. Finally, add some thick, curved lines for her eyebrows. They will be positioned at the angle we show in the picture in order to help portray the sad expression we're going for. Step 3 - Now, draw the start of the face details Now we shall be moving on to some of the trickier parts of this guide on how to draw a sad anime. Don't worry, however, for as long as you follow the images closely then you should have no problems! First, you can begin by drawing her small, sounded eyes. These will have a lot of curved line details above them, and the eyelids will be dropped slightly over them. Then, we shall be drawing some tears dropping from the eyes. These will be drawn as pooling under the eyes and then dropping down in thin sections. Once you have drawn these rivers of tears, you can then finish off this step by drawing her face and ear outlines. Step 4 - Next, draw some more of her facial details This part of your sad anime drawing will see you adding more of the facial features for her. First, we shall draw her nose. The nose will be drawn with some small, simple lines below her eyes. After the nose, draw her slightly open mouth by creating a rounded shape with a bit of a dip in the middle. That will do it for her face right now, so to finish off this step you can then draw her neck and shoulders with more simple curved lines. Then you will be ready to start adding the final touches and details in the next step! Step 5 - Add the final details to your sad anime drawing Now you're ready to add the final details in this step of our guide on how to draw a sad anime. We will be portraying this character to look like their face is blushing as they cry, and to portray this we will do a crosshatch pattern right above their nose. When you have drawn this blushing detail, you're ready for the final step! Before you proceed, you could also add any additional details of your own. What can you think of to add to this picture to personalize it even further? Step 6 - Finish off your sad anime drawing with color This final step of your sad anime drawing will see you finish it off with some color. This is a step where you have a lot of freedom for how you can color it in! In our reference image, we showed you one of the many ways that you could go about coloring the picture. We used a lighter brown for her hair and then used a dull red over the crosshatch lines over her nose. Anime characters often have bright and vivid hair, so you could use any color you can dream of to color it in! Then, do you think you will go for brighter mediums such as acrylic paints and colored markers or will you use something like watercolor paints for a more subtle approach? It's up to you, so have fun and see what happens! 3 More tips to make your sad anime drawing easy! These tips for making your sad anime sketch easier are sure to make you happier! To get the full emotions from this drawing of a sad anime, there were loads of details included. This includes the tears falling from her eyes and the cross-hatching around her nose. These are all great details, but they can make the drawing a bit more complicated and difficult to get the hang of. To make it easier, these details could be removed or simplified. For example, the tears could be drawn with much simpler lines and you could use colors instead of the cross-hatching effect. That is just a small selection of ways to make it easier, but anything you struggle with could be removed or modified. One of the easiest ways that you could make this sad anime drawing easier would be by looking at real faces. There are a few ways that you could do this. One of the easiest would be to use a mirror or a photo of your own face. When doing this, you would want to start by making the saddest face you can. If this isn't something you want to do, then you could get a friend or a family member to make the expression so that you can use it as a reference. This could help you to add a personal touch to the image and make it more unique! Another way to make this sad anime sketch easier would involve using different angles or perspectives. For example, you may find it easier to draw if her face is at more of a three-quarter angle. Or, you may generally find drawing bodies to be easier than drawing faces. If that is so, then you could draw a body for this face to be attached to. That way, the face would be a smaller part of the image and would have less attention drawn to it. Also, it would be another way of making your picture look even more unique! Your Sad Anime Drawing is Complete! You have completed this guide on how to draw a sad anime, and you should be very proud of the finished product! Drawing expressions is never an easy task, so we hope that this guide made it easy and fun for you to conquer this challenge. When you're done with the guide, you can also keep adding to it. Will you draw a background, change some details or incorporate some more ideas? This is your chance to really get creative with it! Creating a sad boy pencil sketch can be a rewarding experience for both beginners and experienced artists. This step-by-step guide will provide you with a clear and systematic approach to drawing a sad boy with a pencil, helping you capture the emotions and expressiveness of the character. Before starting, gather your materials, including a pencil (HB or B for shading and a harder pencil, such as H, for outlining), an eraser, a blending stump or cotton swab for shading, and a sketchbook or drawing paper. Find a comfortable and well-lit workspace where you can focus on your drawing. With these preparations in place, let's embark on the step-by-step process of creating a sad boy pencil sketch. Creating a sad boy pencil sketch involves capturing emotions and expressiveness. Gather materials: Essential tools for sketching. Sketch basic shapes: Start with simple shapes for head and body. Add details: Gradually add facial features, hair, and clothing. Shading and blending: Use pencils, blending stump, or cotton swab for shading. Convey emotions: Capture the sadness through facial expressions and body posture. With practice, you can create expressive sad boy pencil sketches that tell a story. Gather materials: Essential tools for sketching. Before embarking on your sad boy pencil sketch, it's important to gather the necessary materials. Having the right tools will make the process enjoyable and productive. Sad Boy Pencil Sketch Step by Step Graphite pencils: Choose a range of pencils with different lead grades, such as HB, B, and 2B. These pencils will allow you to create a variety of tones and textures in your sketch. Eraser: A good quality eraser is essential for correcting mistakes and creating highlights. Look for an eraser that is soft and pliable, so that it doesn't smudge the graphite. Blending stump or cotton swab: These tools are used to blend and smooth out graphite, creating soft transitions between tones. A blending stump is a paper stump with a pointed tip, while a cotton swab can also be used for blending. Sketchbook or drawing paper: Choose a sketchbook or drawing paper that is suitable for shading and blending. Look for paper that is smooth and has a medium texture, which will allow you to create detailed and expressive lines. Once you have gathered these essential materials, you're ready to start creating your sad boy pencil sketch. Sketch basic shapes: Start with simple shapes for head and body. To begin your sad boy pencil sketch, start by sketching basic shapes for the head and body. This will serve as a foundation for the rest of the sketch and help you capture the overall proportions and pose of the character. Head: Start by drawing a circle for the head. This will be the base for the sad boy's face. Body: Draw a simple shape for the body, such as a rectangle or oval. This will help you determine the character's posture and position. Center line: Draw a vertical line down the center of the head and body. This will help you align the facial features and keep the sketch symmetrical. Basic limbs: Sketch simple lines for the arms and legs, starting from the body shape. These lines will help you place the limbs and determine the character's pose. Once you have sketched these basic shapes, you can start adding details to the face, body, and clothing. Add details: Gradually add facial features, hair, and clothing. Once you have sketched the basic shapes for the head and body, you can start adding details to bring your sad boy character to life. Facial features: Begin by sketching the eyes. Draw two almond-shaped eyes, slightly slanted downward to convey sadness. Add small circles inside the eyes for the pupils and a curved line above each eye for the eyebrows. Sketch the nose as a simple line or a small triangle below the eyes. For the mouth, draw a curved line that turns down at the corners to create a sad expression. Hair: Draw the hair according to your preference. You can create a messy, unkempt hairstyle to emphasize the sad mood. Use short, choppy lines to depict strands of hair falling over the forehead and ears. Clothing: Sketch the clothing that the sad boy is wearing. It could be a simple shirt, hoodie, or jacket. Pay attention to the folds and wrinkles in the clothing to add depth and realism to your sketch. As you add details, remember to consider the overall composition of your sketch. Make sure the facial features, hair, and clothing are well-proportioned and work together to convey the emotion and mood of the character. Once you are satisfied with the details, you can move on to the next step of shading and blending. Use pencils, blending stump, or cotton swab for shading. Shading and blending are essential techniques for adding depth, form, and texture to your sad boy pencil sketch. By using different pencil grades and blending tools, you can create a range of tones and smooth transitions. Pencils: Use a variety of pencil grades, such as HB, B, and 2B, to create different values. Use a harder pencil, such as HB, for lighter areas and a softer pencil, such as 2B, for darker areas. Blending stump or cotton swab: Use a blending stump or cotton swab to blend and smooth out the graphite. This will help you create soft transitions between tones and eliminate harsh lines. Shading techniques: There are various shading techniques you can use to create different effects. For example, you can use hatching (creating a series of parallel lines) or cross-hatching (creating a series of intersecting lines) to create darker areas. You can also use stippling (creating a series of dots) to create a softer, textured effect. As you shade and blend, pay attention to the direction of the light source. This will help you create realistic shadows and highlights. Remember to consider the overall composition of your sketch and use shading to draw attention to the focal point. Once you are satisfied with the shading and blending, you can move on to the final step of refining the details and adding finishing touches to your sad boy pencil sketch. Convey emotions: Capture the sadness through facial expressions and body posture. To create a truly expressive sad boy pencil sketch, it's important to capture the emotions through facial expressions and body posture. Facial expressions: The eyes and mouth are key to conveying emotions in a pencil sketch. Draw the eyes slightly slanted downward and add small wrinkles or lines around them to indicate sadness. For the mouth, create a curved line that turns down at the corners to create a sad expression. You can also add a slight frown or pout to the lips. Body posture: The body posture can also convey sadness. Draw the shoulders slumped forward and the head slightly bowed down. You can also have the character looking down or away from the viewer to emphasize the feeling of sadness and isolation. Clothing and accessories: The clothing and accessories can also be used to convey emotions. For example, you could draw the character wearing a hoodie with the hood up, which can create a sense of hiding or withdrawal. You could also add other elements, such as tears or rain, to further emphasize the sadness. Overall composition: Consider the overall composition of your sketch when conveying emotions. Place the character in a way that draws attention to their emotional state. You could use negative space or other elements in the background to create a sense of isolation or loneliness. Be carefully considering the facial expressions, body posture, clothing, and composition, you can create a sad boy pencil sketch that effectively captures the character's emotions and tells a story. In this step by step drawing guide, we will walk you through the process of creating your very own sad anime character. Follow along and unleash your creativity! Materials Needed Pencil Eraser Drawing paper Markers or colored pencils (optional) Step 1: Start with the Basic Guidelines Begin by sketching the basic guidelines for your sad anime character. Start with an oval shape for the head and add a vertical line down the center to help with symmetry. Draw a horizontal line halfway down the oval to indicate the eye line. Step 2: Draw the Facial Features Next, draw the eyes, nose, and mouth of your sad anime character. Add droopy eyes with slightly curved lines and a frowning mouth to convey a sense of sadness. Experiment with different facial expressions to find the one that best captures the emotion you want to portray. Step 3: Add Hair and Details Now, add hair to your sad anime character. Draw flowing hair that falls softly around the face to enhance the emotion of sadness. Add details such as tears or a pouty lip to further emphasize the character's mood. Step 4: Refine and Outline the Drawing Refine the features of your sad anime character and outline the drawing with a darker pencil or pen. Pay attention to small details and make any necessary adjustments to ensure your character looks as emotionally expressive as possible. Step 5: Add Color (optional) If desired, use markers or colored pencils to add color to your sad anime character. Choose colors that enhance the emotion of sadness, such as shades of blue or gray. Experiment with different color combinations to create a unique and impactful visual representation of sadness. Conclusion Congratulations, you have successfully learned how to draw a sad anime character! Remember to practice regularly and experiment with different facial expressions to improve your drawing skills. Have fun expressing emotions through your art and let your creativity shine! A beginner-friendly guide to learning how to draw a great-looking Anime Boy Crying with easy, step by step drawing instructions and video tutorial. Great for beginner artists! Step-by-Step Tutorial for Drawing an Anime Boy Crying This easy anime drawing guide will help you draw a tearful boy. 1. Begin by drawing the guideline grid. This will help you place the facial features in later steps. First, draw a circle with a straight, vertical line passing through it. Draw a horizontal line perpendicular to the first. It should be placed below the midpoint of the circle and reach the circle's edges. Below the circle, draw another, smaller horizontal line. 2. Draw the bottom portion of the face, using the guidelines. Use curved lines to draw and detail the ears. They should diverge from the head where the horizontal line meets the circle. From the base of one ear, extend a long curved line. Extend it around the end of the vertical guideline to meet the base of the opposite ear. Notice how it contours the jaw and chin in the process. Enclose a small curved shape halfway between the horizontal lines, just to the left of the vertical line. This indicates the nose. 3. Erase the bottom of the original circle. Then, use the grid to place the eyes. Draw the thick curved lines of the tightly closed eyes between the ears and the central vertical line, just below the horizontal line. Notice the short curved lines that indicate wrinkles around the nose. Draw the negative style eyebrows centered above the eyes. They should be at least twice the distance from the horizontal line as are the eyes. 4. Erase the longer horizontal grid line. Then, use the vertical line and remaining horizontal line to place the mouth. Draw the mouth over the perpendicular grid. Use a long curved line to enclose the irregular round shape. Then, use additional curved lines to outline the upper and lower teeth, and the tongue. Draw a short curved line beneath the mouth. Use two more lines to outline the neck. 5. Anime expressions are often exaggerated, and anime tears are no different. Rather than individual teardrops, you will draw a stream coming from the eyes. First, erase the remaining grid. Draw full and partial oval shapes overlapping the closed eyes. Then, draw curved parallel lines from the eyes to the jawline. Enclose a round teardrop at the bottom on one side. Complete the boy's neck and shoulders using curved lines. 6. Draw the boy's hair using curved lines that meet at jagged points. 7. Finish enclosing the hair. You've drawn a sad anime boy, but can you make him feel happy, surprised, or angry? Try changing his crying face to reflect a range of different anime facial expressions? If you're looking for some more inspiration then you should check this easy, step-by-step sad anime face cartoon drawing tutorial. Use a long, curved line, and note the contours of the cheek and chin. 2. Sketch the hair, fully enclosing the outline of the face. Use long, curved lines to sketch in the top of the head. Then, use a series of curved lines of various lengths to complete the locks of hair around the face. For each lock, use two curved lines that meet at a sharp point. Note how some of the locks overlap one another. 1,900+ drawings & coloring PDFs 50+ ebooks Ad-free website LEARN MORE 3. Continue drawing the long hair as if it is blowing in the wind. Use curved lines of various lengths. At the end, allow the lines to meet at jagged points. Use additional curved lines to add texture to the hair. 4. Draw the girl's neck and torso. Extend a pair of lines downward from the head to form the neck. Then, extend curved lines from just above the base of the neck. Bring them together at a point. This outlines the inside of the shirt collar. Form the sides of the collar using curved triangular shapes. From the collar, extend curved lines on each side to form the shoulders. Use sets of parallel lines to demarcate the sides of the vest. 5. Continue to texture the hair with long curved lines running the length of it, allowing them to meet at points. Use thick curved lines to indicate the eyebrows. 6. Draw the first crying eye. Use a thick curved line for the eyelid. Beneath it, outline the eye using curved lines that meet at points. Use a curved line, doubled back upon itself, to enclose the tear. For the eye itself, enclose several increasingly smaller circles within one another. Shade one to indicate the pupil. Add dimension by drawing a curved line above the eyelid. 7. Draw the remaining eye. Again, use a thick curved line for the eyelid, and enclose the shape of the eye beneath it. Draw a teardrop shape at the corner, and enclose several increasingly smaller circles within the eye. Shade one to indicate the pupil. 8. Use a curved line to draw the small nose, and enclose several teardrop shapes streaming down the cheek. 9. Add additional detail to the hair as necessary. Then, use curved lines to sketch the frowning mouth and chin. Color your anime girl. Anime often employs bright and fanciful colors, so be creative.
